Director's Letter

Welcome Agent Alpha,

My name is Andy Jiang and I am happy to serve as the Director of the CIA. I have been doing MUN for the past 3 years and have attended over 20 conferences. Last year I was a delegate like you. Now, I have been promoted to lead you all.

This will be a guide for your experience as an agent of the CIA. Personally, I hope to get closer with all of you throughout this conference. While this committee is incredibly innovative and enjoyable, if you are aiming for the top, you better give all that you have got. Your fellow AD HOC agents are some of the most talented delegates I have ever encountered. As a bit of a disclaimer: achievement in this committee will be extremely difficult. However, I am sure you all signed up for a challenging experience, so it is too late to back out now.

Throughout this conference, I will be helping you out using the communication tool explained below. If you wish to see me in person and inform me of a legendary speech or a sly political maneuver you are more than welcome to.

Director of the CIA
Andy Jiang

AD HOC: The Explanation

As some of you may know, last year's ADHOC was a conference-wide committee that was a defining theme of PacificMUN. Things do not change with this year's iteration. Prior to the conference, you have received cover-up assignments to conceal your true identity. Well, big surprise: you will actually be serving as a delegate of that committee for the entire conference.

Thankfully, that is not it. Although you are a normal delegate in almost every aspect, you are responsible for carrying out a set of ADHOC goals that distinguish you from the rest of the committee. Your success in this conference will be defined by your dominance over your assigned committee and ability to accomplish your ADHOC goals.

AD HOC: The Structure

This year at PacificMUN 2018, Ad Hoc will be the ultimate committee of challenge and excitement. The committee follows an unorthodox structure, spreading its influence to almost every corner of PacificMUN. As some of the most excellent diplomats in the entire conference, you shall leech onto every committee without the knowledge of other delegates or staff members.

As the conference first begins, each agent will disguise under the identity of an average delegate and partake regularly in debates. Based on the committee they are in, agents will be advocating for a specific set of policies that you must pay attention to. Your exact goals can be found later in your backgrounder.

As a method of checking in with me, a report must be written at the end of each committee session which should explain if there are any other strong delegates and blocs. Based on these reports and our own observation, we will make judgments and create crisis goals throughout the conference. From assassinating specific political figures to manipulating world trade regulations, AD HOC agents poison all committees and subdue them to the organization's bidding.

AD HOC: The Communication

Unlike a normal committee, there will be very minimal opportunities for you to see me. However, under my clever IPC disguise, I will be moving from committee to committee to check on your progress. When I am not within your direct vicinity, please do not panic, as there will be an established slack channel for our communication. Worth mentioning again, is that you are responsible for drafting a brief summary after every committee session. This will then be shared during an in-person meeting during a few designated briefing sessions, the details of which will also be shared via Slack.

As mentioned earlier, most of your communication with me will be accomplished over a Slack channel. The invite link for Slack will be below and we encourage you all to sign up and test it out. However, if for some reason you cannot do so, email will then be used to primarily communicate.

We highly prefer that you use the committee chats for communication; however, if you wish to message a delegate privately without the Dais' knowledge, feel free to (just do not get caught!). Also, please use your agent tag as your display name... A name is a dangerous weapon.

AD HOC: CIA Goals

As the foreign shield of America, the CIA's vision is simple: to promote the greatness of America and to eliminate any potential threats. As the most powerful nation in the world, the USA's power seeps through the entire United Nations. It is absolutely critical to preserve the star spangled banner as a symbol of unrivaled power.

There are multiple means to achieve and maintain national greatness. Later on in this guide, you will receive guidelines on committee-specific goals to help you achieve this mission. However, here are some general guidelines:

1. In the status quo, many countries hold objections to the long-dominant western values. Specifically, Middle Eastern nations and Asian powers such as China seek to dethrone the West as the leaders of the world. It is finally time to re-secure this position of leadership. Seek to push for the acceptance and relevance of general western values in all of your occupied committees.
2. In order for the United States to successfully implement its ideologies, there must be little foreign oppositions. Within a committee session, this can be done by gathering delegates into one significant bloc of ideas. Strike down lesser blocs to minimize conflicting opponents.
3. An important aspect of establishing the dominance of the CIA is for your agents to fully control their individual committees. Though sponsorship does not matter for a usual MUN committee, it is essential for AD HOC Agents to sponsor as many resolutions as possible.
4. Historically, the United States has taken off of the backs of the developing world. The oil from the Middle East fueled the USA's industrialization, while proxy wars in various nations secured its spot as an international giant. It is critical for CIA agents to capture the needs and characteristics of the developing world and garnering its support.

AD HOC: Your Goals

While we will be giving you goals and updates throughout the conference, these goals are overarching and will be the most important ones you will receive relevant to your position:

Country: Germany

Committee: IBC

Topic A:

Briefing:

The United States government must strive to remain the leading force in the world; however, new ethical restrictions underlined by the UN is significantly halting progress. To combat said restrictions, the USA must relocate its laboratories to alternative nations with looser regulations.

Your Mission:

Ensure there are restrictions and impose universal ethics codes that focus on MEDCs whereas developing nations are free from any universal code, especially ones that use direct human testing.

Topic B:

Briefing:

The United States can harness the potential of individuals throughout the nation and even has the power to bring certain individuals of interest into their own agency. For them to identify some of the most intelligent, capable, and undiscovered minds in their homeland, they must see to allowing the research of Human augmentation to go public

Your Mission:

Ensure a clause is included which opens up this field of research to the public sector.

AD HOC: Reports

While we will not explain to you how awards will be given out, we will say that these updates explain to us your progress, specifically with your goals. Therefore, it is critical to update them consistently. These reports should be modeled as such:

- Moderated Caucus You Proposed and Passed
- Papers you Sponsored (and Passed)
- Top 5 strongest delegates
- Key ideas that were discussed
- How have you tried to accomplish your goals (and which ones you have)
- Bloc positions on the floor (including participants)

Godspeed
CIA

Post-Script: It should go without saying that you are caught distributing this information or are caught as a delegate of AD HOC... the punishments will be dire.
